

The “AI Slide” Fingerprint?

After seeing enough presentations, certain patterns became surprisingly easy to recognise.

01

Visual clutter

Lots of text boxes, shapes and decorative elements — often without an obvious reason.

02

Dramatic wording

Polished phrases repeat across presentations, even when the reflection underneath is thin.

“It is not X,
but Y.”

“This changed everything.”

03

Pastel everything

And somehow, the colour palette often looks very familiar.

The issue isn't the aesthetic itself — it's when polished output hides a lack of personalised thinking.
